I was primarily responsible for the view.java and controller.java files. Their main function is to display the user menu and retrieve data from a txt file to display to the user.

Everyone completed their assigned tasks according to the group report. During the task completion period, some members who were less familiar with the Java language received help from those who were more familiar with it. We had meetings almost every week. This task not only helped me become more familiar with Java and design patterns, but also made me realize the importance of teamwork and collaboration.
